DEDICATION

to

THOMAS WOLDEN PHILLIPS

who

- introduced us to the world of anatomy, the geography of the human body;
- so charted that course as to give us a deeper understanding of all medicine, and of life itself;
- possesses an unassuming charm of manner, a genuine kindliness, a sympathy and understanding, exemplary to us all;
- has been, and always shall be, our beloved teacher and friend.

With respect and admiration, we dedicate this book,
an inadequate expression of sincerity.

The Class of 1938.

FOREWORD

THE Hahnemann Medical College has witnessed the passing of ninety years devoted to the nexus of human art and endeavor—medicine. The Class of 1938 is a product of these ninety years.

Human forces are unchanging. Though we have been enriched by tradition and the experiences of those who mixed in the ebb and flow of life before us, the basic laws of life govern us as they did the lives of the very first graduating class. This volume, then, is not a cry of the present. Its pages, depicting the present, echo the past. Prepared by the Class of 1938, it stands as a permanent record of their years at Hahnemann.

The desire to stamp with permanence the fleeting events of the present is a common human weakness. We frankly admit to that failing. Surely all that has so quickly slipped by during the past four years can not be entrusted to the vagaries of individual memory. It is the aim of this particular volume of THE MEDIC to add to the tradition of Hahnemann by recording the events of the present, and to detail faces and facts so as to preserve them against the mighty erosion of Time.

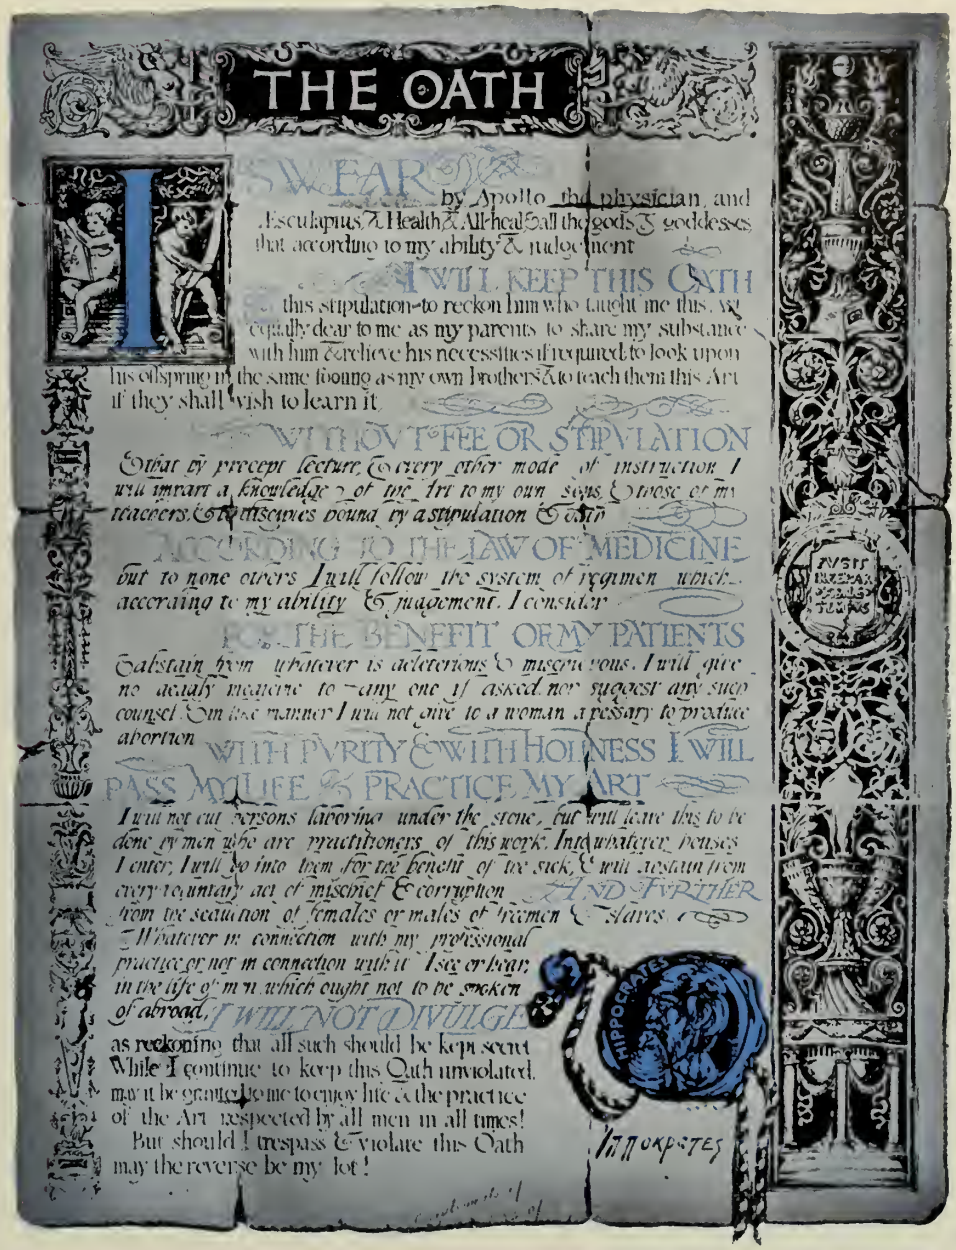
HIPPOCRATIC

HIPPOCRATES, born on the Island of Cos, B. C. 360, was the most celebrated physician of antiquity. He belonged to the Æsclepiadæ . . . being the seventeenth in descent from Æsculapius. He received his instruction in medicine from his father and from Herodicus. Besides being a practitioner of medicine, he was a great philosopher. After spending some years traveling through Greece, he settled and practiced his profession at Cos, finally, at about the age of eighty, dying at Larissa. Hippocrates was guided in his profession by the highest principles of honor and humanity. The Hippocratic Oath, reproduced herewith, bound all who sought to practice the noble healing art in the most rigorous bonds of honor and brotherhood.

OATH



THE OATH
I SWEAR
by Apollo the physician, and Aesculapius & Health & All-heal & all the gods & goddesses that according to my ability & judgement
I WILL KEEP THIS OATH
this stipulation-to reckon him who taught me this Art equally dear to me as my parents to share my substance with him & relieve his necessities if required to look upon his offspring in the same footing as my own brothers & to teach them this Art if they shall wish to learn it
WITHOUT FEE OR STIPULATION that by precept lecture & every other mode of instruction I will impart a knowledge of the Art to my own sons & those of my teachers & to disciples bound by a stipulation & oath
ACCORDING TO THE LAW OF MEDICINE
but to none others I will follow the system of regimen which according to my ability & judgement I consider
FOR THE BENEFIT OF MY PATIENTS
& abstain from whatever is deleterious & mischievous. I will give no deadly medicine to any one if asked nor suggest any such counsel & in like manner I will not give to a woman a pessary to produce abortion
WITH PURITY & WITH HOLINESS I WILL PASS MY LIFE & PRACTICE MY ART
I will not cut persons laboring under the stone, but will leave this to be done by men who are practitioners of this work. Into whatever houses I enter, I will go into them for the benefit of the sick & will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief & corruption
AND FURTHER
from the seduction of females or males of freemen & slaves
Whatever in connection with my professional practice or not in connection with it I see or hear, in the life of men which ought not to be spoken of abroad, I WILL NOT DIVULGE as reckoning that all such should be kept secret
While I continue to keep this Oath unviolated, may it be granted to me to enjoy life & the practice of the Art respected by all men in all times!
But should I trespass & violate this Oath may the reverse be my lot!

CHRISTIAN FREDERICK SAMUEL HAHNEMANN'S ancestral and cultural background bespeak his unique qualifications for the achievements of his life work.

Born in poverty it served him only as a stimulus to his inherent ambition and deep penetration of the problems of life and those of his professional career. His early education was carefully guided and based upon thought and independence of thought. His unusual and extensive preparation in languages, translations and research, his almost superhuman acquisition of universal knowledge, his intelligent opinion and courage of convictions, his untiring energy and diligence, his versatility in sciences and arts, his high code of morals in relation to his professional duties towards his patients and fellow men, and his high-grade principles of citizenship were ideally climaxed by his sincere faith in divine guidance.

Born in the Reform Period of medicine, stimulated by the demands for reforms in all the activities of life, it is no wonder he became the great medical reformer in Materia Medica and Therapeutics.

EULOGY OF THE

THERE are men and classes of men that stand above the common herd: the soldier, the sailor, the shepherd, not infrequently; the artist rarely; rarelier still, the clergyman; the physician almost as a rule.

He is the flower (such as it is) of our civilization; and when that stage of man is done with, and only remembered to be marveled at in history, he will be thought to have shared as little as any in the virtues of the race.

Generosity he has, such as is possible to those who practice an art, never to those who drive a trade; discretion, tested by a hundred secrets; tact, tried in a thousand embarrassments, and what are more important, Herculean cheerfulness and courage. So it is that he brings aid and cheer into the sickroom, and often enough, though not so often as he wishes, brings healing.

IT WAS during the reign of Queen Victoria that a simple forester's cottage near Balmoral Castle, North Scotland, became the setting for a human drama that will live forever in this painting, "The Doctor." ¶ A favorite servant of the Queen lived in this cottage with her husband and their only child. Upon hearing that the child was seriously ill, the Queen wired to London for her personal physician, Sir James Clark. Sir James came by special train and remained in constant attendance upon the child until the crisis was past. The child recovered. ¶ In 1891, Queen Victoria commanded Sir Luke Fildes to place the scene on canvas in commemoration of the faithful devotion of the physician.

IEMORIAM

DR. FRED WARREN SMITH

IT IS a sorrowful privilege of friendship to say farewell to Dr. Fred W. Smith, who died on Sunday, February 20th. Many are more competent to speak of his skill and scholarship, his thirty-five years of service to mankind and to medicine. But his greater monument is the grief and sense of loss of thousands who called him friend.

In unusual degree this doctor was the friend of those he helped and healed. His busy days must often have been rewarded by their affection and gratitude. They speak of him now as a good friend gone out of their lives, not as a physician whose place may be filled by another.

We knew that Dr. Fred Smith had high standing among his colleagues, a place of honor in the councils of medical men, a heavy load of responsible duties to hospitals and professional societies. But patients put their faith in physicians for other reasons than these. In this man of medicine we were aware of a quiet courage, a splendid integrity. We sensed a true strength of character as the foundation of his simplicity and humility. And beneath his outer ruggedness we knew the warmth of his heart, and his compassion for all human suffering.

. . . the loss to friends and fellow-workers is grievous when a good man is suddenly gone. A wound is left which only time can heal. But there is comfort and inspiration in the manner of Fred Smith's passing. When death would wait no longer he laid aside his work, his learning and his skill to meet it manfully and cheerfully. "And is it then so sad a thing to die?"

to the Young Physician

WHATEVER your career may be, do not let yourselves become tainted by a deprecating and barren scepticism, do not let yourselves be discouraged by the sadness of certain hours which pass over nations. Live in the serene peace of laboratories and libraries. Say to yourselves first: 'What have I done for my instruction?' and, as you gradually advance, 'What have I done for my country?' until the time comes when you may have the immense happiness of thinking that you have contributed in some way to the progress and to the good of humanity. But, whether our efforts are or not favoured by life, let us be able to say, when we come near the great goal, 'I have done what I could.' "

DEAN PEARSON IN HIS COLLEGE OFFICE

TO the Class of 1938:

The strenuous years spent in the Hahnemann Medical College in gaining a scientific foundation for the practice of medicine will soon be but a memory.

Numerous facts have been learned but more important are the observance of logical methods of thought and the cultivation of proper habits of study and deduction.

Each member of the Class of 1938 receives automatically the prestige of Homeopathy which has accumulated for one hundred and fifty years.

The fact that Samuel Hahnemann was one of the leading medical scientists of his day and propounded a law of therapeutics which has withstood the test of time and has been of inestimable value to suffering humanity gives each member of this class a heritage unequalled in all medical history.

The pioneers in Homeopathy fought for their rights and demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt the efficacy of Homeopathy. Nothing more can be said for surgery or any other branch of medicine.

Medicine has made phenomenal strides during the past decade, but throughout all scientific development the Law of Similars still provides a scientific and reliable method of prescribing drugs.

The Hahnemann Medical College is fortunate in being the direct successor of the first Homeopathic medical college to be established over one hundred years ago.

It has become a tradition for sons of Hahnemann to become successful practitioners of medicine and in every community where they are located their patients are receiving the advantages of Homeopathic treatment.

There is a definite demand for Homeopathic physicians and the success of every member of the Class of 1938 is assured, if he will follow the precepts inculcated by his Alma Mater.

Each member of the loyal and efficient Faculty and Staff of the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital has given his best efforts to present accurate and reliable professional knowledge gained from years of active experience and to give his students a comprehensive scientific medical education.

Reverence for the pioneers of Homeopathy and for the loyal and efficient staff will surely be emulated by the Class of 1938. Professional success is not only hoped for but is expected and will be assured, if each member of the Class of 1938 will be mindful of his obligations to the highest ideals of the medical profession, Homeopathy, and the Hahnemann Medical College.

FREDERIC J. VON RAPP, LITT.D., Provost.

TO the Class of 1938:

You are now about to put into practice much of the experience of others that you have acquired during the past four years. Unselfish devotion to the healing of those unfortunately afflicted by accident or disease must in time build for you the spirit of good will so necessary for success in any community you have selected for professional activity. How you succeed in your ambitions and pursuits depends upon the humane attitude and unselfish service given at all times.

Your Alma Mater always stands ready to assist with such advice and guidance as you may demand of her in overcoming some of your problems.

May you go forth with the determination to live up to those standards so well exemplified by the lives of Hahnemann, Hering and many others, that we may be proud of you.

FREDERIC J. VON RAPP.

Medical Director of the Hospital

TO the Class of 1938:

As Medical Director of Hahnemann Hospital and as head of the Student Health Service, it has been my opportunity to meet and know a majority of the Class of 1938. It is therefore my opinion, based on this acquaintance, that I can trustfully say that this is one of the best classes that ever graduated from Hahnemann Medical College. The health of the community will certainly be enhanced when these young men get into high gear.

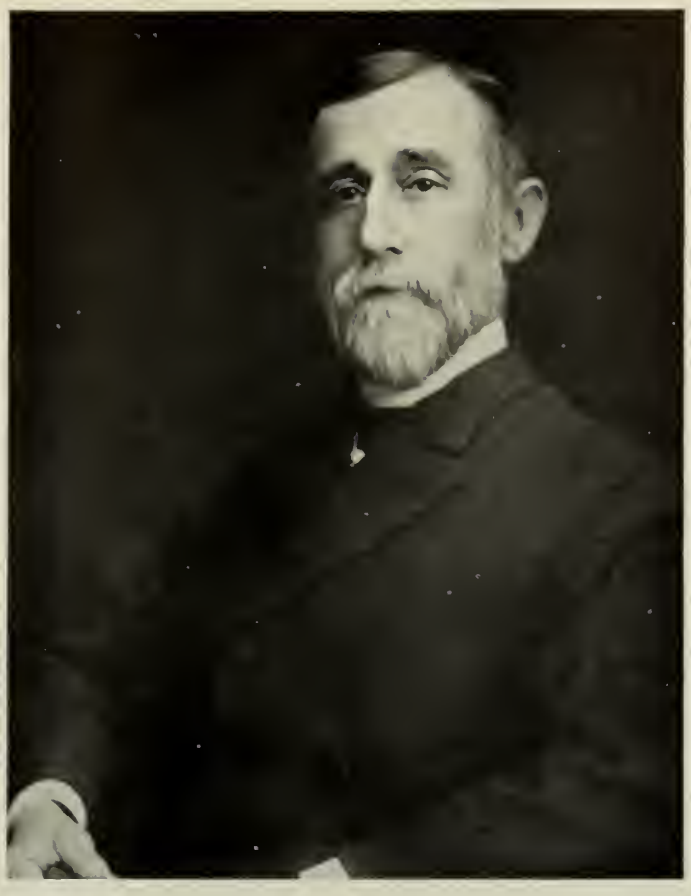
CEREBRO-SPINAL NERVOUS SYSTEM

Dissected and Mounted by Dr. Rufus B. Weaver

Late Professor of Anatomy

Hahnemann Medical College



RUFUS B. WEAVER

By Thomas W. Phillips, M.D.

THE Hahnemann Medical College is the proud possessor of the most famous anatomical specimen of its kind, "Harriet." This specimen is the complete dissection of the human nervous system. Harriet was a maid suffering from tuberculosis while in the employ of Doctor Weaver. In the spirit of benevolence she requested that her body be used for the furtherance of science. In those days of superstition, medical schools found it difficult to obtain cadavers for dissecting. When Harriet died in 1887, Doctor Weaver proceeded to carry out her wish. After much thought and study of anatomical materials at home and abroad, this specimen, of which we are now in possession, was produced. Its preparation and mounting consumed six months of devoted labor. It is a marvel of patience and skill. Up to that time such work had never been attempted.

PHOTOGRAVURES of this work were accepted from Doctor Alfred Heath for the Royal College of Surgeons, London, and the Council of Medical Registrars of Great Britain. It was exhibited at the World's Fair in 1893 where it was awarded a diploma and medal.

At this writing it is on exhibition in the fire-proof vault of the College Museum, still in remarkably good condition though it has been moved about many times during recent building operations.

Doctor Weaver was born at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, in 1841. He was graduated from Pennsylvania College (now Gettysburg College) then matriculated at Pennsylvania Medical College. In pursuit of further knowledge, he attended Jefferson Medical College and the University of Pennsylvania, receiving part of his training under Dr. David H. Agnew of the University, and Dr. Amos R. Thomas of Hahnemann Medical College. He was appointed demonstrator in the department of Anatomy at Hahnemann Medical College in 1870. In 1891, he was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine. In 1897, he became Professor of Regional and Applied Anatomy. This position was held until his retirement in 1925.

Doctor Weaver's kindness, sympathy, and understanding impressed itself indelibly on those who were fortunate enough to come under his influence. These impressions will continue to play an inevitable part in moulding and shaping their lives and, through them, the lives of those who come after them.

Painting by K. Bishop.

SPEAKING of nurses, Sir William Osler once said: "The trained nurse has become one of the great blessings of humanity, taking a place beside the physician and priest, and not inferior to either in her mission."

Any doctor will admit to the truthfulness of this statement of "the great physician." During our four years at Hahnemann we have become increasingly cognizant of it. As students in the wards and out-patient departments of the hospital we have at many times been aided and assisted in our work by the helpfulness of our nurses.

As an acknowledgment of these kindly services and courtesies, we voice appreciation to:

The Hahnemann Nurse

ADMONITIONS

to the Student of Medicine

WHOEVER takes up medicine should seriously consider the following points: firstly, that he must one day render to the Supreme Judge an account of the lives of those sick men who have been intrusted to his care. Secondly, that such skill and science as, by the blessing of Almighty God, he has attained, are to be specially directed towards the honour of his Maker, and the welfare of his fellow-creatures; since it is a base thing for the great gifts of Heaven to become the servants of avarice or ambition. Thirdly, he must remember that it is no mean or ignoble animal that he deals with.

Lastly, he must remember that he himself hath no exemption from the common lot, but that he is bound by the same laws of mortality, and liable to the same ailments and afflictions with his fellows. For these and like reasons let him strive to render aid to the distressed with the greater care, with the kindlier spirit, and with the stronger fellow-feeling.

Thomas Sydenham, 1624-1689.

From the preface to the first edition of "Observationes Medicæ Circa Morborum Acutorum Historiam et Curationem." London, 1676.

THE CLASSES

THE CLASS OF 1938

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

President—Charles K. Ives

Vice-President—Albert J. Zimmerman

Secretary—Michael A. Cambest, Jr.

Treasurer—Edwin L. Cicconi

Representative to Student Institute—George P. Desjardins

Class President's Message

To the Class of 1938:

It seems odd to have something to say to you and not have to wait 'til the wisecracks and side-remarks from the gents in the back row die down.

I wish we could always go on as we have in the last four years, but we're to be turned out into the world to fare for ourselves. From now on I can't change exam dates or do my best to smooth out the misunderstanding we may have, and if the classroom is changed, you'll have to find out for yourselves where you're supposed to be. But I, for one, will miss the headaches and good times we've had together and will look back on our school years with more and more enjoyment as time goes by.

And now, as we follow our various paths and take whatever Fortune throws our way, may I wish you all the best of luck and happiness in your social, financial and medical lives, and may you always look back on these years at Hahnemann and remember them as the grand times they really have been.

Charley Ives.

THE SURGEON

Dr. Gustave A. Van Lennep

Fingers that see and eyes that feel.

THAT our names and faces should appear on the pages to follow . . . That we are shortly to be accorded the privilege of entering the profession of our choosing . . .

Two people are in the fullest measure responsible.

Theirs, has been the greatest single influence . . .

Theirs, the greatest sacrifices to make . . . sacrifices, willingly and unselfishly made that we might attain our desired goal.

In an earnest hope that it may quicken each of us, in our relations with the sick and suffering,—to give the same selfless service They have given us, we humbly dedicate this page, to

Senior Class History

By William Likoff

THE sun breaks the early morning mist. The ocean breeze is heavy with salt and dampness. There, where the last fringe of mist clings to the surface, white is no longer white, but a glistening crystal-flecked amber, and the green vibrant and deep-sparkling.

We stretch back.

We feel the slowing throb of the boat.

We stretch deep.

The ship's wash, one long rising swell curling with foam, races, pauses, and settles with a slow hiss. And as we watch the yellow and green tints grow into full and rich colors with the thinning of the mist, suddenly we know the voyage is at an end. Somehow the thought dulls the poignant rush of blood in our veins. Though the end means a goal attained, there is much we would like to recall and recapture, and nurture through the vagaries of the years to come . . .

* * * * *

We were recruited from a spare-rib of fate—in one breath ambitious and ignorant, diversified by virtue of environment and nature, unified by virtue of a common goal—medicine. We danced a common step those first hectic months. Men destined to be geniuses, those relegated to the role of mediocrity, and those of an inferior tinge attempted to find, and find quickly, the coziest niche in the scheme of things.

For us, chemistry blew hot and cold, histology more consistently lukewarm, and we learned to adjust our mental dress to the varying academic temperatures. With the adjustment came a certain ease. New knowledge crowded the old—threatened to devitalize it—and thus we were forced to learn and relearn. Dr. Hepburn awed, Dr. Snyder challenged, Dr. Chandler snapped, Dr. Phillips coaxed—a teaching quartet remarkably well prepared to stir every conceivable type of human mentality. We absorbed chemical reactions, tissues, and anatomy, pausing only long enough for the required periodic regurgitations.

But all wasn't study. Politicos sniffed the air and liked it. J. K. Finley received the presidential mantle and J. Perlino as Vice-President, G. Nichols as Secretary, and N. Flick as Treasurer trouped along. The class dance designed to enrich the treasury quite naturally depleted it, but no one murmured an objection for, just as quite naturally, it was a grand affair. A beer, a sandwich, and a live rhus tox swaying gently in the breeze made for a memorial afternoon at Dr. Borneman's suburban laboratory.

Then from nowhere summer sprouted. We left the hallways nicely done up with some knowledge, much theory, and a certain confidence and spirit more fundamental than either.

A demon's prank that second year. The "ologies"—path, bacterio, and physio—had their devilish day. For Dr. Sappington we developed acute imaginative visual faculties and frantically-quick retentive memories. Four dyspneic flights found us servants of a mechanical maze and a croaking chorus of frogs as we matched wits against the intricacies of muscle contraction. Anatomy took a practical turn, but demanded its full quota of hours. As a whip for our straining energies we were allowed the flourish of stethoscopes, and were initiated into the sanctum of breath sounds and galloping hearts. Dr. Bristol turned medical hand-maid and taught us how to drape a kitchen for operative work. With walls scrubbed down he had time to treat bee bites and burned and frosted tootsies. Dr. Shollenberger instructed in the proper bandage twist and we applied such knowledge in a crippling manner to one another. And with the spring flowers Dr. Kirby piqued our curiosity with a bit of elementary medicine.

The class chose new officers: J. Eynon, President; J. Bitman, Vice-President; W. Tucker, Secretary; and G. Desjardins, Treasurer. The class dance cleared its decks this time. Christmas spirit brought forth a rousing party for "Wild Bill" Sylvis and roaring with delight student and professor were one. Gathered at the class banquet we got a sniper's view of the new school still wet on the blueprint, and we thrilled at the progress which was Hahnemann's.

And then with nary a swish we became men—over the summer. Dean Pearson said it always happens that way. It was just as well, for the Junior year marked a manly step. The first whiff of clinical material plus rock-bottom medical lectures were realizations of long expectation. For the moment the study of medicine was no longer a series of almost imperceptible progressions, but rather one startling departure after another. The opportunity to absorb rather than gulp knowledge piecemeal was finally offered; habit being strong, few took advantage.

The class dressed itself anew—C. K. Ives, President; W. Salaky, Secretary; and P. Fago, Treasurer. The "Wild Bill" Christmas party passed from its suckling state of the year before to one of new virility. Paying homage to a grand man, the class at the same time gave expression to the new and broad joys it was experiencing in medical life.

Imperceptibly we slipped into the senior year. Responsibilities lay heaped upon heap just to the future. The full flavor of the application of our erudite learning was our immediate lot. If seniority leads to overbearing, the acute realization that at best we had a piddling knowledge of medicine faded the first overbearing flush. The neatly-put word pictures of the year before failed to hold up unfailingly against the practical problems, and thus ours was a dual role—seniors by class, neophytes in experience. We tussled with a new, non-academic problem—internship. Already the class structure began to split for desires were varied and placements widely separated. But we payed homage to the last year of official organization and once again C. K. Ives assumed the role of President, with A. Zimmerman, Vice-President; M. A. Cambest, Secretary; and E. L. Cicconi, Treasurer.

To the tune of a ripping Blue and Gold Ball, twelve actual labors, "next to-the-table" surgery, and medical cases galore the year slipped away—slowly—imperceptibly—irrevocably . . .

* * * * *

With the mist, the mood—both momentary and heavy. We snap to full realization of time and place. We step forward, wet our lips, taste their salt, and smile—for so little has passed; so much remains to come.

JOHN FRIEND

on Observation and Reading

EVERY Physician will make, and ought to make, observations from his own experience; but he will be able to make a better judgment and juster observations, by comparing what he reads and what he sees together. It is neither an affront to any man's understanding, nor a cramp to his genius, to say, that both the one and the other may be usefully employ'd, and happily improv'd in searching and examining into the opinions and methods of those, who lived before him, especially considering that no one is tied up from judging for himself, or obliged to give into the notions of any author, any further than he finds them agreeable to reason, and reducible to practice. No one therefore need fear, that his natural sagacity, whatever it is, should be perplexed or misled by reading. For there is as large and fruitful a field for sagacity and good judgment to display themselves in, by distinguishing between one author and another, and sometimes between the several parts and passages in the same author, as is to be found in the greatest extent, and variety of Practice.

A man may practice,—all the days of his life, and yet be never the wiser for his experience, if he neglects to make the proper observations, which that experience might suggest to him; . . . whereas the searcher of authors has the benefit of other men's experience together with his own; and it is from the joint-concurrence of these, that we can hope for any considerable advancement in knowledge.

From "The History of Physick" . . . in a discourse written to Dr. Mead by J. Freind, M.D., Part I., London, 1725, pp. 303 et seq.

THIS year marks the forty-first anniversary of the Beta Chapter of Alpha Sigma fraternity, which was organized at the Hahnemann Medical College in the year 1897.

Founded at the New York Medical College in 1893, the fraternity soon established chapters at other medical colleges to become one of the pioneers among national fraternal medical organizations.

ONE of the oldest of existing national medical fraternities, Phi Alpha Gamma was founded March 25, 1894, at the New York Medical College. In 1895 the organization secured a national charter.

This year marks the forty-first anniversary of the Gamma Chapter which was chartered at the Hahnemann Medical College by the national organization January of 1897.

THIS year marks the thirty-sixth anniversary of the Vertebra Quarta of the Pi Upsilon Rho which was organized at Hahnemann Medical College in 1901. This fraternity began as the Ustion Society at the Hahnemann Medical College in Chicago in the year 1876. A National Charter was secured in 1901 by the members at the Cleveland Homeopathic Medical College and since then Pi Upsilon Rho has been the oldest National Medical Fraternity known to exist.

THE PILLARS

of Medicine of Paracelsus

HE WHO wants to know man must look upon him as a whole and not as a patched-up piece of work. If he finds a part of the human body diseased, he must look for the causes which produce the disease, and not merely treat the external effects. Philosophy—the true perception and understanding of cause and effect—is the mother of the physician. In this understanding rests the indication of the true remedy, and he who is not able to understand will accomplish nothing.

"Nature—not man—is the physician . . . Try to enable yourself to follow Nature and she will be your instructor. Learn to know the storehouse of Nature and the boxes in which her virtues are stored up. The ways of Nature are simple, and she does not require any complicated prescriptions.

"A physician who is true to his own higher self will also have faith in himself, and he who has that faith will easily command the faith of the people.

"To cure diseases is an art which cannot be acquired by the mere reading of books, but which must be learned by experience. Neither emperors nor popes, neither colleges nor schools, can create physicians. They can confer privileges and cause a person who is not a physician to appear as if he were one, but they cannot cause him to be what he is not."

Phillipus Theophrastus Bombast of Hohenheim, known as Paracelsus. (1493-1541)

The Hahnemann Institute, which is the Students' Council of the Hahnemann Medical College, was organized in 1921. Its membership of twelve is derived each year by electoral choice, and consists of the regular line officers of President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer chosen by the students of the College from the Senior Class, the President of each class, and an elected Representative from each class.

The Institute has for its fundamental purpose the encouragement and control of all intramural activities—class, fraternal, and society; the provision of student representation where designated; the extension of all possible assistance to students when needed; the maintenance of decorum throughout College and Hospital property as far as students are concerned; the handling of any difficulties which may arise thereon; and the control of all extramural relations concerning the Student Body.

In 1933 Dr. Horst Agerty and Dr. Deutsch of the Class of 1934, with the assistance of Dr. William W. Young of the Department of Materia Medica, formulated plans for the forming of a society to:

1. Augment and intensify intimate knowledge of Homeopathic principles among its members.

2. Enroll its members from the incoming senior class on a selectively meritorious basis with due regard to scholarship, personality, and loyalty to intrinsic Homeopathic interests.

3. Foster scientific inquiry into the philosophy of Homeopathy with the sincere intent to conform its principles in accordance with the basic laws of science.

"Education is a game in which the student makes the first move."

The Garth W. Boericke Society was organized in 1936 for the purpose of stimulating interest in the treatment of those conditions confronting the ordinary practitioner.

The Society meets monthly for the discussion of some therapeutic problem as presented by one of the members. Following constructive criticism and practical suggestions offered by the faculty adviser and guest speakers, the entire group joins in the discussion. For the year 1937-1938 problems relative to cardiac disease, cough, syphilis, birth control, sterility, and various endocrinological dystrophies were discussed by the Society.

The Blue and Gold basketball five again demonstrated unquestionable talent during the 1937-1938 season. Exhibiting a fast-breaking attack, a competent defense, and a spirited will to play, the quintet attained an enviable record in spite of one of the most difficult schedules attempted.

The finely tempered cooperative spirit of the team members, together with the brilliant mentorship of Joe Bitman, resulted in an athletic unit rarely equalled in post-graduate institutions. Competition for starting positions was keen throughout the entire season, and at no time was Coach Bitman able to commit himself as to the varsity five.

The highlight of the season was the annual game with the Flower Medical College held at the center-city Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Spectators were treated to a wildly exciting and closely contested game which was decided in Hahnemann's favor only after an extra period of play. The team also courted the Goddess of Victory in games with Textile, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and the quintet representing the Temple Medical College.

THE BLUE AND GOLD BALL

IT IS with justifiable pride that the Senior Class points to the brilliant success of the Annual Blue and Gold Ball held this year on April 30 at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. Over four hundred couples gathered in the historic grand ballroom of the hotel and danced to the melodious tunes of George Olsen and his orchestra. The dance, as is customary, was preceded by the annual Orchestra and Glee Club concert. The orchestra, under the baton of Lieutenant Frankel was most enthusiastically received by the guests. The Glee Club, under the able direction of Mr. Ramon Spritzler, and with Mr. Chester Albright accompanying, gave their customary superlative performance.

The Blue and Gold Ball has definitely established itself as part and parcel of the Hahnemann Medical College both past and present. This fact was acutely borne out by the splendid and whole-hearted support offered by the Alumni of the College. Such support not only guaranteed the success of the dance, but also gave to the occasion a more meaningful purpose other than that of a routine social gathering.

Much credit is due Drs. Harry M. Eberhard and William Y. Lee for their unstinted support and untiring efforts in their role of faculty advisers.

Mr. William Kirkland, the chairman of the dance committee, accomplished his purpose in excellent style and justly deserves the plaudits of all who availed themselves of the opportunity of attending the affair.

There is not the slightest question of doubt that the Blue and Gold Ball of 1938 maintained, if not surpassed, the loft standards set by the many glorious affairs which preceded it.

The Clinico Pathological Society was organized in 1936 to further student interest in pathology. A special effort is made to interrelate the clinical aspects of medicine with the underlying pathological basis for the symptomatic picture the patient presents.

During the current year monthly meetings were held under the able mentorship of Dr. Fisher. Several joint meetings were held with the Boericke Society. The society elects no officers.

AN APPRECIATION

by Hartley Coleridge

MEDICINE is not, like practical geometry, or the doctrine of projectiles, an application of an abstract, demonstrable science, in which a certain result may be drawn from certain data, or in which the disturbing forces can be calculated with an approximation to exactness. It is a tentative art, to succeed in which demands a quickness of eye, tact, thought, and invention, which are not to be learned by study, nor without a connatural aptitude, to be acquired by experience. And it is the possession of this "sense," exercised by patient observation, and fortified with a just reliance on the "vis medicatrix," the self-adjusting tendency of nature, that constitutes the physician, as imagination constitutes the poet.

From "Biographia Borealis," London, 1833.

The Seven Ages of Man

All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
And then the whining school boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the bard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on his nose, and pouch on his side
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion—
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

—Shakespeare.

Apply these seven ages to the cause of acute retention:

1. "The infant, mewling and puking in the nurse's arms." The cause of his retention is undoubtedly either extreme phimosis or atresia of the meatus.

2. "The whining schoolboy with his satchel" probably has a stone in his bladder.

3. "The lover sighing like furnace" is likely to be a case of retention following acute urethritis.

4. "The soldier, full of strange oaths," has almost certainly a urethral stricture.

5. "The justice, in fair round belly with good capon lin'd," is probably a case of prostatic enlargement.

6. When "the sixth age shifts into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon," a common cause of acute retention is cystitis complicated by ropy mucous.

7. And the last age "that ends this strange eventful history" is atony of his bladder.

George Nitsche—Because he managed to hold on to those upper incisors even when he laughed.

Alex Mozzer—The two plus Senator from Connecticut.

Berny Siegel—Because he never called back for those pathology notes.

James Trombino—Because some day he'll donate it to the museum.

John Gindhart—"Shooting wild whiffle birds with Payne. Wish you were here."

Les Halley—Because Rommer and Sherman never did quite succeed in anesthetizing him.

Carl Kline—Because of a certain yeller shirt.

Jack Renger—Because he had good enough sense not to photo everything he saw.

"Peewee" Basinger—Shupis' mighty little control lever.

Ralph Leyrer—"Love on the run."

Walt Kaminski—Ask him about case taking.

Furman Kepler—"Up here there are a 1000 nuts; down in —— dispensary there's only one."

HILLBILLIES

Charley Ives—"Quiet you mugs."
Chet Albright—Finley's first assistant.
Joe Barbella—"Short lecture."
Woody Bashline—The Obstructive Surgeon.
Dominic Bianchi—Because he understands the emergency treatment of a shiner so very well.
Frank Bird—Tosculum's little robin red breast.
Jimmy Bone—"Do you know that ten men flunked this exam last year?"
Dennis Bonner—"Where ya gonna dip the beak tonite, lad?"
Larry Bonnet—The Dictator of 101.
Carmel Bozzi—"Hi ya, kid."
Dick Caldwell—The Chief.
Mike Cambest—Because he knew so many places to get samples.
Mike Cappola—U. S. Postmaster-in-Chief.
Bill Carero—Because we could never catch him doing anything wrong.
Al Catenacci—Because he would never cover the stiff in the anatomy lab without earnestly pleading that he had done it the day before.
Joe Cooper—His strut makes the Shim-Sham look like a ballet.
Pasquale Dante—Inferno's Fire Chief.
George Derickson—Dr. Snyder's projectionist.
George Desjardins—Because as Treasurer he collected no dues.
Tony Di Fabio—Because "De-feet" knows not defeat.
Sam Dinenberg—Because Kline was reluctant to play him in tennis.
Tony Di Sario—The bugler of the Century Club.
Grimmy Di Stefano—Because he didn't give us much of a chance to get our personal-life-spies aworkin'.
Bill Salaky—"Two, Mr. Lewis."
Ralph Bishow—He's got it in his notes.
Pete Agnone—Because he never blocked Lawrence's midnight field goals.
Marty Kraus—Because he got up at 5 A. M. to study and then fell asleep during lecture.
Ed Delagi—Because only his psuedo-esthetic sense could appreciate the grasshopper and its tasty delicacy.
Lou Decina—Because of what Addonizio said.
Addie Addonizio—Because he must have been there with Decina.
Jack Rommer—Because he never did get around to sell us City Hall.
Joe Bitman—"It's kinky."
John Grego—Because of Grove.
Dan Grove—Because of Grego.

Differential Diagnosis

NOW there's a difference between being shocked, dead, and just plain scared. The chances are the patient wasn't dead; he said he felt lousy—and we really ought to pay some attention to a patient's remarks inspi'e of personal convictions. If he was shocked, he didn't resemble a textbook picture of that condition, for he fumed and cussed like one of Dr. Klopp's favorite charges. By elimination, then, the patient was plain scared and sore—a viscious combination. But the etiological factor—ice water applied vigorously to the naked torso—makes that combination understandable.

The Hahnemannite with the yellow skin and black fluffy hair is a mighty physician. Under pressure he makes Merck's little handbook look like a collection of antiquated facts on black magic. He was the medical officer in charge of our above-described patient. What is more, he made no bones about telling that fact to the Guardians of Peace when they called around to find out what was abuzzin'.

"This man is in shock!" he explained through the barred door.

Guardians of Peace don't know much about medicine. They can drive the wagon around on two wheels, and blow hell out of a siren, but they still don't know much about medicine.

"We're comin' in, shock or no shock!"

"It's my duty to inform you that this man is in no condition to be disturbed!"

"And it's my duty to tell you to get out of the way and open up the door unless you're hankerin' for a first-class manglin'."

The Hahnemannite is a strapping peanut weight. The Guardians of Peace were fair enough competition for Joe Louis. But being a true and first class medical officer, Peanut put his shoulder against the door and supported its splintering frame.

"I tell you this man is in shock and . . ."

The door gave way. Peanut landed in the wall paper. With difficulty they extracted him from the pretty red flowers.

Now there is a difference between being shocked and dead, but as we pieced Peanut together, there wasn't one of us who would venture a diagnosis.

"I Didn't Do It"

MOB RULE ruled the roost. He thumbed his nose neatly, but unmistakenly, at Authority. In fact, in the rush of things he called Authority sundry unclean names, and then got to thinking that the names were true. Being an amiable fellow he proceeded, without much ado, to give Authority a bath. Now, there are all sorts of baths; briefly, we can classify them as the benign and the soapy. Mob Rule never was much at remembering classifications—he tried ice.

Authority turned softly and yelped. He yelped loud enough to break up a pinochle game. To tell the truth he did break up a pinochle game a short mile and an eighth away, and three or four of his dyspneic, pot-bellied pals came around for bribes and beer.

Not having any beer—that is, beer which wasn't already organically combined—and having an honest person's abhorrence for bribes, Mob Rule ran like hell. One of Mob Rule's best pals—Henchman—ran fast enough to lose his pants and wind all at the same time. But the Lord watches over his children, particularly the pantsless ones, and He guided Henchman to a door and inside the door was a friendly face—Neutral.

Neutral isn't much to look at. He has a nose that sneaks out and asserts itself in no uncertain terms; and his jaw, not being of genteel breed, has the gall to offer that smeller ample competition. But Neutral doesn't need a profile. His brain is snap-fire; he cerebrates like a scared rabbit cutting capers. And what is more important, his heart is the only piece of gold F. D. R. couldn't ship off to Fort Knox.

Henchman isn't a Bob Taylor. He isn't an Einstein either. He gets there mind you, but by long, circuitous routes.

"Puff, puff," said Henchman, "I didn't do it. So help me I didn't do it."

Neutral leaped up, snapped the door lock, and eyed Henchman—particularly the rose-colored shorts which held forth where the pants had failed.

"Puff, puff," Henchman repeated, "I did do it. So help me, I did do it."

Neutral didn't heed a consultant to figure out that anyone who did and didn't do a thing in the short space of five seconds was irrevocably guilty. But Neutral made the mistake of eyeing the rose-colored shorts a second time and then sympathy played havoc with his sterner soul.

"What's it all about?" he said sadly.

"Mob Rule and me and the others," Henchman explained, "got hold of Authority and gave him an ice douche."

"And?"

"Authority and his cronies are waitin' up in my room. They're waitin' up there for ME!" He hung his head—like a child. "The douching happened in my room." This last came almost as a whisper.

Neutral had a plan figured before Henchman knew he had finished the last sentence. "Did they see you?" he asked.

"No."

For the next hour Neutral carefully explained to Henchman that if he returned to his room and registered surprise at the official gathering, his chances of escaping apprehension were a thousandfold better than if he returned and, not yet questioned, proclaimed his innocence. For the next hour, Neutral rehearsed Henchman in the art of a nonchalant entrance and in the art of registering the manly art of surprise. It took a little less time to button and adjust Henchman's pants. And then, much as a mother leads her prize offering to the classroom, Neutral led Henchman to the place of reckoning.

They paused before the door. Neutral patted Henchman affectionately and encouragingly on the shoulder. The door was opened—carefully. Authority and his cronies were waiting, and rose as one man.

"Puff, puff," Henchman fairly shrieked, "I didn't do it! So help me, I didn't do it!"

And The Delivery Went On

IT WAS three A. M. It also was the first time this blushing medico had ever scrubbed up, and he wasn't quite certain about the technique. The cap fit; so did the mask; but the trousers were carved for a healthier soul and boasted no adjusting string. But time and births wait for no man—not even a man with a sliding pair of step-ins. The interne commanded speed; the nurse beseeched with sleepy eyes; trusting in beneficent fate the student came forward with a cautious step and heavy heart.

The head was bouncing around on the perineum when the first warning came. Slowly, unmistakably, the trouser waist sought a more secure circumference. 'Tis said the stomach swells on exhalation, and so the student exhaled. But inhalation followed and with scarcely a ruffle the trousers hung over the bitrochanteric diameter. But just for the moment. The descent thereafter was rapid and sure. The sleepy-eyed nurse became exophthalmic; the progressive downward course of the trousers was accompanied by an equally progressive and annoying female snicker.

"Where the 'ells the draft coming from?"

But obs duty is inviolate; and so is obstetrical asepsis. The young medic flushed a hypertensive red; the cold air swished through his femurs; the nurse continued with her full-throated laugh; —but the delivery went on!

Greetings:

There is a basketball game scheduled between the coaches of the Nurses League and the Central Y. W. C. A. to be held Monday evening, April 4th, promptly at 7:30 P. M. Wear white shorts and blouses if you have them. If not any kind of shorts and blouse will do.

Do plan to come!

Sincerely,
Majorie Magson.

And just in case Joe was too busy, we'll venture a reply.

Majorie Dear:

Sorry about the shorts—ours are striped, and of not quite stout enough fabric for the occasion you outlined. We've got to disappoint you about the blouses, too. Leo Di Caro says he'll be damned if he'll cover up his chest, basketball game or no.

But don't fret. The game must go on. Oh, yes, Lou Decina will be there—in armour. We hope you'll take the hint and dress likewise.

Anxiously,
The Whole College.

A Fizz-ological Cat-astrophe

UP IN the physiology lab there's only one swing time—that of the jumping lever. The wires, conduction coils, and batteries stamp out the rhythm, the levers dance, the students are the apathetic wall-flowers. But there are times when the orchestra goes haywire, and the dancers, too. It is then that the wall-flowers truly blossom.

Two students were working conscientiously; one for science's sake, the other because Dr. Flanagan was nearby. They had gone to great pains to correctly lay out a gray-coated champion feline—as alley cats go. The neck was neatly and painlessly slit, the cannula placed just so, and the drug rapidly and efficiently given. With nary a hitch the drum spun, and the pen scratched a neat graph on the smoked paper.

But this particular alley cat was weary of life. Many a battle he had fought in the eerie hours of the morning; many a love ditty he had sung to his missus, and to some pert misses as well, we suspect. After such a life of love and battle, his present position on the dissecting table was really quite beneath his dignity. So, without much ado, he smartly curled his whiskers upward toward the cats' Valhalla, heaved a last worried sigh, and scrammed.

Our student friend who feared the mighty Flanagan was the first to notice the passing of the animal's weary soul. And a quick-thinking wit was he, even in the presence of the Angel of Death. By careful manipulation of his index finger against an essential wire he continued the lever excursions without his studious partner appreciating the change.

But the human finger tires. (See Experiment No. 1.) The lever, out of control, began spasmodic, wild, and varied gyrations. Our conniving friend strove mightily to keep things under control, but it was all in vain. His partner ran for the pat-rolling laboratory professor before he could pop a word of explanation out of his mouth.

"Dr. Flanagan," young Einstein panted, "our pussy's having a convulsion."

With a tolerant smile the Professor queried, "Are you sure?"

"Hell yes!" Then less enthusiastically, "If he isn't, the graph is."

Together they ran. When they arrived, both were winded. All else was quiet. The wielder of the index finger had wisely disappeared. The animal was quite still—and cold.

"If you will," the good Doctor began, . . .

"I will, and right now, too," the student quickly replied. With that he picked up a small, but efficient ringstand from the table and went alookin' for his pal.

HYDROTHERAPEUTIC HANGOVER

Employee Given Bath in Hilarious Session Staged by Students at Local Hotel

As an aftermath of a "hydrotherapeutic treatment" given the night watchman at the Americus Hotel early today, six students at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, each paid fines and costs totaling $12 in police court this morning.

While the hydrotherapeutic incident was not mentioned during the police court session, the medical students, who are in Allentown visiting the State Hospital as part of their training, were fined after police recited a number of complaints received during the past several days. Chief Clarence R. Mensinger declared that some of the students pulled poles from trolleys at 6th and Hamilton Streets and threw books from the hotel windows. Captain Charles J. O'Donnell testified that complaints had been received that bags of water were dropped from windows on the tenth and eleventh floors of the hotel.

One of the students appearing in court testified that he was struck on the head with a bag filled with water while standing in front of the hotel.

After the sentences had been meted out and police court adjourned, one of the sextet pleaded with Alderman Sallie T Gallagher that he and his companions were not guilty of the disorderly conduct charge. He gave the first inkling of the water bath incident when he reported that he and two of his fellow-students found a man, with hands and legs tied, lying in the hall of the hotel. The man was "all wet," the student said, so the trio set about remedying a severe case of shock which he appeared to be suffering from.

While the men were "working over" the night watchman, Officers Angstadt, Fronheiser, Youchonis, Frankenfield and Knappenberger arrived at the hotel in response to a request from the management. They arrested the men. Three others were arrested later.

The policemen learned that the watchman, while making his rounds, was seized and tied. Then, fully clothed, he was plunged into a tub of water. His shouts frightened those responsible and they fled. This afternoon the watchman is reported to be none the worse for his experience save a "hydrotherapeutic hangover."

JAPAN DENIES PANAY ATTACK

Tokyo, Dec. 17—Official American reports to Washington that the United States gunboat Panay and three merchant ships were machine-gunned as well as bombed in the Yangtze River by attacking Japanese were categorically denied today by an official spokesman for the Japanese Government.

The spokesman sought to refute all charges, made by eye-witnesses of the attack on the Panay and other American vessels, that Japanese soldiers aboard two launches swept the gunboat with machine gun fire while it was sinking after being struck by Nipponese aerial bombs.

Future Action Uncertain

In addition, the spokesman told questioners that the Japanese Government has not yet decided whether additional replies will be dispatched to Washington and London in response to stiff protests against attacks on American and British vessels in China.

From other sources, however, it was learned that the Japanese Government is drafting replies to both Britain and the United States, and that the note to America is expected to be handed to United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew tomorrow.

The spokesman, however, contended that Japan's first note of apology for the Panay attack "might be deemed satisfactory."

He declared the Japanese Government as yet has no complete information regarding the Panay incident, and that a full investigation must be completed before Japan takes further action.

He stated that the actions of the officers concerned in the assault were being investigated.

P. S. Which patient, huh?

To The Class of 1939 We Leave:

DR. KLOPP'S "zykoses" and "fooey."

The indications for: Lackawanna Railroad; a syphilitic patient with a negative W. and K., no symptoms, no organic lesion,—in fact no syphilis; forceps in constipation; hospital solarium; nux vomica 200 m.

The lectures in immunology.

Nephritis, nephrosis, nephrotic nephritis, nephritic nephrosis, and apis.

All the G. C. in the city—you'll find it in the gyn dispensary.

The thirteen-year-old mammies looking for the guilty Step-and-Fetchit—they're in obs.

Dr. Clemmer's short-hand diction.

Miss Whalen in the medical dispensary, in the surgical dispensary, but—unfortunately—never in the dog-house.

Sally and Sue—Rittenhouse 5793.

The Saturday afternoon football games you'll never see—because Dr. Roman might take roll. (He never does, but he's not too old to learn.)

Dr. Frosh's passion for a tube and an ovary—in a specimen pan.

The backbone of the surgery dispensary—George the orderly.

The pinochle game in the accident dispensary—cops only.

Circumcision under local, complicated by a hematoma as big as a baseball.

Dr. Ferguson's Saturday morning rambling bee.

Dr. Ashcraft's butter-ball belly.

Dr. Steinhilber's many fortes—neurology, psychology, criminology, roll-callology.

Dulcamara for any ailment so long as you live in a stucco house.

The army, the navy, the air corps, and the Dean's letter of introduction for your internship battle.

The clothes tree on which to hang Dr. Bernstein's hat and coat.

Dr. Sappington's sense of humor—too little used, too little appreciated.

Allentown—just Allentown.

Examination papers—never returned, never marked, never read except by the man in the adjoining seat.

Dr. Russell Fisher's intimate pathological descriptions—please, somebody catch him in a mistake.

SONNET

The far horizon, evening star, the sea;
High peaks impinging on an Alpine sky;
Gondolieri, chanting as they ply
Their oars, the Russian steppe, mists rising free
From jagged rocks where fall Niagara's tears.
Such things as these are lost to us. We are Submerged in study . . . Pleasure lies so far Afield . . . What waits us in the trail of years?

We are a strangely maddened sort of breed.
Of our own choice, the fullest years of youth,
The fleeting years, we fling aside to heed
An inner call for knowledge and for truth.
A fair exchange with life, the wholesome breadth
Of youth for this—the chance to conquer death.

M. J. S.

Summing up his philosophy of life, one great physician wrote:

"I have loved no darkness
Sophisticated no truth,
Nursed no delusion
Allowed no fear."

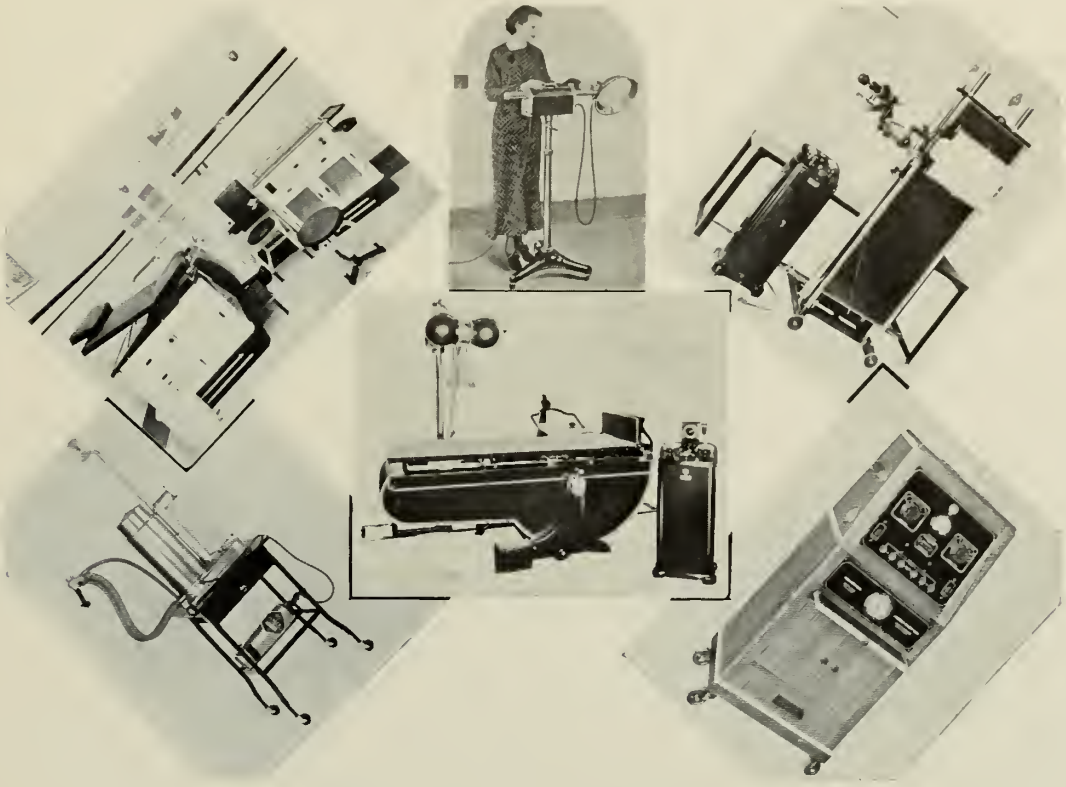
DEDICATION

TO the emerging doctor we dedicate our two stores. A source of "SERVICE INFINITELY RENDERED" and an unswerving policy of rendering YOU extra VALUE for every dollar you spend on BEEBER Higher Quality equipment.

TO you, the physician, we offer the pleasant paradox of CHARACTER and QUALITY EQUIPMENT at LOWEST costs. The phenomenal J. BEEBER COMPANY growth is the result of knowing how to serve the physician better, giving him EXTRA-VALUE and representing only products whose makers have earned the respect and faith of the physician.



One of Philadelphia's Finest Stores Serving the Philadelphia Physician

The physician visiting the Philadelphia branch store of the J. Beeber Company will be richly rewarded by viewing one of Philadelphia's most extensive exhibitions of X-ray apparatus and Electro Physical Therapy equipment.

Their new store recently opened occupies a beautifully appointed main floor and mezzanine located at 1109 Walnut Street. Here you will have your first opportunity of seeing in Philadelphia the following equipment represented directly for the manufacturers: MATTERN X-RAY and Fluoroscopic apparatus, Fischertherm Short Wave Machines, Fischerquartz Cold Quartz Mercury Lamps for general and Orificial treatments, Benedict Roth Basal Metabolors, beautifully laid out displays of physician's furniture for consultation and treatment rooms manufactured by "Brooklyn" and an infinite array of smaller instruments. Here under one roof the physician will find his entire armamentarium in the 20th century manner.

The Philadelphia physician will indeed be gratified by his visit to Philadelphia's newest store dedicated to specifically serving him.

EXPLOITATION of the MEDICAL PROFESSION

EVERYWHERE it is rampant—newspapers, magazines, billboards, radio. "Your doctor will tell you that . . . ." "Medical science has found that . . . ." "The greatest specialists in Timbuctoo say that . . . ." And the rest of the story is, of course, "Use our pills or our vitamins three times a day; ask your doctor."

You are forced to compete with those who offer your patients free advice regarding medical treatment. You deliver Mrs. Blank's baby today, and tomorrow she will receive by mail samples of baby foods with complete directions how to use them. Indeed, some physician representing a commercial organization and knowing that the case is in your hands may address a personal letter to your patient offering his services free.

It has been said that ten more years of the present trend of interference in medical practice will do away with the need for private practice of infant feeding and other branches of medicine.

Mead Johnson & Company have always believed that the feeding and care of babies and growing children is an individual problem that can best be controlled by the individual physician. For over twenty years and in dozens of ethical ways we have given practical effect to this creed. We hold the interest of the medical profession higher than our own, for we too, no doubt, could sell more of our products were we to advertise them directly to the public.

So long as medical men tacitly encourage the present trend, so long will serious inroads continue to be made into private medical practice. When more physicians specify MEAD'S Products* when indicated, more babies will be fed by physicians because Mead Johnson & Company earnestly co-operate with the medical profession along strictly ethical lines and never exploit the medical profession.

Acknowledgment

THE "Medic" of 1938 has passed in review. It is the sincere wish of the Editorial Staff that the contents of the volume have met with your highest expectations.

We would be ungrateful, indeed, if we did not acknowledge the aid we have received from innumerable individuals.

Members of the Faculty Advisory Committee gave much time to listen to our multitude of troubles, and to rectify them. Dr. H. Russel Fisher and Dr. Joseph V. F. Clay, in particular, were never lacking in giving us unselfish advice at the most opportune times.

Dr. W. A. Pearson, the Dean of the College, was most kind and willing with his help. Many members of the faculty, too numerous to mention, considerably lightened our task with their contributions and suggestions.

Mr. Dwight Barnes, of the Westbrook Publishing Company, Mr. Harold Lafferty, of the Philadelphia Weeks Engraving Company, and Mr. Vincent Sheehan, of the Merin-Baliban Studios, deserve our sincere thanks for their cooperation at all times.

Lastly, we wish to thank the entire Student Body, the Faculty, members of the Alumni, as well as our many advertisers, for their financial support.

If we were to leave a legacy to the oncoming Staff of the next year's "Medic," it would be this: Bear in mind that sameness is always distasteful and tiring. Try, as we have tried, to make your book different from those of past years—if you do this, you may look back upon your product, in future years, and derive the satisfaction that goes with any job well done.

And so, reluctantly, we "put a caboose on" this, the "Medic" of 1938, by wishing each of you every success in the world.

John Charles Whitaker.
